EXTRACT. WE WERE CHILDREN ONCE. We were children when we thought That the heavens were very near And that all our mothers taught Would to-morrow be made clear: When we questioned everywhere. Drending not a full reply, When the world was just as fair And as distant as the sky. When the marvels that we dreamed Waited for our waking looks, When our fairy fables seemed Truer than our lesson looks; When for all who well had striven woot the featly garlands grew, And when sleeping, unforgiven. Was what nobody could do. We were children when we feared Only darkness, nover light, For our troubles disappeared Always if they came in sight; When our love was like our breath-Careless, natural, unperceived: When we wondered about death 'As a thing to be believed: When we drew a covering line. Good from evil, night from day-On the one side, all divine : On the other look away! When our wrath was swift and sure. Just because we seemed to know Nothing wrong could touch the pure the packet was opened, to be in a clammy, And our loved ones all wore so ; When all weariness of life Was but waiting for a bliss. When all bitterness and strife Could be finished with a kiss: When all spoken words were meant When no promises could break, When all storms were only sent For the protty rainbow's sake. Over all the lovely seene Necessary darkness flowed: Now the years that intervene Hide that once familiar road. We remember all the way-Oh, it was so fair, so dear Where it led we cannot say,

But we know it led not here. For the labour wins no crown. And the strong hope dies in pain, And the twilight settles down, And love comforts us in vain. We have watered lifeioss plants. Falsehood fills the common sir. Every footstep disenshants There is parting everywhere. Forest doors are full of night; Enter, and the path shall wind As a string of tender light, As a living wreath untwined, Nature wastes no drop of dew. "Past the dying root it flows; What you did you never knew Till there sprang a sudden rose. Every branch breaks out in song (All that hirds say must be true), Right grows in the heart of wrong-Yours the task to let it through! Every gathered leaf decays; Wait for one immortal wreath! What is love with life that playe To the love that lives in death! Twilight grows so sweet and olear. We can tell that morn is night And our dead have come as near As our childhood's happy sky. Did the darkness only seem? Was it all our own false will? Was our life a little draum? Father, are we children still? M. D. SMEDLEY, in Good Words. HE HOPED FOR THE BEST.

was telling her husband how well she was getting along. "I am afraid," he said, " that it is nothing but a 'spasm.' I've known people before who would tackle a foreign language, expecting to know all about it in a month, and by the time they could translate the son of the baker has the loaf of bread of the daughter of the gardner,' or some such rank nonsense as that, and had bought twenty-five to fifty dollars' worth of foreign books, their enthusiasm would die away like the morning mist." "But that's not the case with me," replied Mrs. Jones, confidently. "I am doing so splendidly. Professor Froglegg says that in a short time I ought to begin to think in French, and when one can accomplish that his progress is always rapid." "Well," said Jones, with a sigh, "I don't want to interpose any objections, of course, and if you can learn to think in French I shall be glad of it. It's something you have never been able to do in

A GOOD STORY. A good story is told of "Cham," the great French caricaturist. Going into a restaurant where he was unknown, he settled into a corner seat which happened to be generally reserved for a stockbroker, who dined in the house every evening. The waiter said nothing: but the stockbroker, coming in felt wroth at the usurpation, and was about to complain of it when he recognised the features of the caricaturist. He thought he would have a joke at the expense of " Cham," he knew that tall, thin, solemn stranger. No; the landlord had not seen him before. "Ah! quickly as possible, or else he will scare away interest. In the 12th Report of the Registrarall your customers," whispered the stockbroker. " It with executioner !" The landlord shuddered, but instantly walked up to " Cham, " and begged him to depart, adding that he would not ask him to pay for lottery reversed, as for unequal same it sells what he had eaten, and would indeed not equal prizes; it is a trading firm in some consent to touch his money at any price. A QUEER STORY. The Tullamore correspondent of the Duhlin Express writes :- "Some time back a couple of persons in Tullamore were informed that a considerable quantity of money was concoaled in the strong room or lock-up of the constabulary barrack. A project was set on foot to get into the room and make an effort to get at the money. The exact spot in which it was deposited was shown in a diagram enclosed in the communication by the parties, but as it was found that access. to the room could not be obtained without the police, two members of the force received with the diagram referred to. The money. was described as being in Bank of Ireland notes enclosed in a large envelope. The sergeants provided with the diagram found. the packet just as it had been described. It was concealed under part of the wainscotting of the lock-up in a part of the wall against which a water eistern had been constructed on the outside, and so much had the moisture affected it that the notes were found, when

> LIFE ASSURANCE. Dr. Franklin, the illustrious American amongst the many other wise things he said pronounced a life assurance policy to be "the cheapest and safest mode of making a certain provision of one's family." ' As all persons of sound mind and ordinary education are desirous of making-some provision for those dependent upon them, to guard against their being rendered destitute, or thrown upon the charity of strangers, it is important to show that not only is Dr. Franklin's view of life assurance correct. but that even those who have no family or friends to provide for may find in life assurance safe and profitable means of investment. It is by no means a scheme for taxing the public, or curtailing present enjoyments; and though absolutely necessary where there is a provision to be made for a family, comparatively few people look at it in any other light. In accordance with the spirit of the present age, it is right to convince our readers, and that they may convince their friends, it will. Dr. Farr who has written largely on life assurance to the improvement of the science says:-" Probably if the following question were put to those whose lives are now insured—what is the advantage which you derive from investing your surplus income in an assurance office? More than one-half-would, reply, "the certainty of my executors receiving a sum at my death, were that to take place to-morrow. and, calling the landlord aside, asked him if This, he adds, is but half an answer; for not only does the office undertake the equalization of life as above described, but also the Well, then I advise you to order him out as return of the sums invested with compound
